REPORT

A crash course for the upcoming UGC NET Examination was organized by the Competitive Exam Cell on 14th December 2025 in online mode and on 19th December 2025 in offline mode. The programme was specially designed with a focus on teachers and postgraduate students, recognizing their aspirations to qualify for the National Eligibility Test and advance in their academic careers. The initiative aimed to provide intensive training within a short span of time, covering essential topics, exam strategies and practice sessions that would equip participants with the skills and confidence required to succeed.

The sessions were enriched by the expertise of Dr. Joyson Jose, Assistant Professor in the Department of English at BMC (Autonomous), Thrikkakara, who served as the resource person for the course. His deep subject knowledge and engaging teaching style made the programme highly interactive and insightful. His guidance helped participants not only strengthen their understanding of core concepts but also develop effective approaches to tackle the exam. His ability to combine lectures with discussions and practical exercises ensured that the sessions were dynamic and responsive to the needs of the learners.

One of the highlights of the crash course was the inclusion of mock tests that simulated real exam conditions. These practice sessions allowed participants to experience the pressure and format of the actual examination, thereby improving their time management skills and boosting their confidence. The mock tests also provided valuable feedback, enabling aspirants to identify their strengths and areas requiring further improvement. This holistic approach ensured that the programme was not merely theoretical but also practical, preparing candidates to face the examination with clarity and assurance.

The initiative was well-received by the participants, many of whom expressed appreciation for the structured training and the supportive environment created during the sessions. The combination of lectures, discussions, and practice tests offered a balanced learning experience that catered to diverse learning styles. The success of the programme was further underscored by the achievement of one teacher who successfully qualified in the UGC NET Examination after attending the crash course. This accomplishment stands as a testimony to the effectiveness of the initiative and highlights the transformative impact such programmes can have on aspirants.

The positive outcome has also increased the demand for similar crash courses in the future. Participants and observers alike have recognized the importance of such initiatives in empowering teachers and postgraduate students, enabling them to pursue academic excellence and professional growth. By offering targeted training and expert guidance, the Competitive Exam Cell has demonstrated its commitment to supporting the academic community and fostering a culture of achievement.

In conclusion, the crash course organized in December 2025 was a significant step toward equipping aspirants with the tools necessary to succeed in the UGC NET Examination. With its focus on intensive training, interactive sessions, and practical practice, the programme not only enhanced subject knowledge but also instilled confidence among participants. The success story of a teacher qualifying after attending the course serves as an inspiring example of its effectiveness. As demand grows for similar initiatives, such crash courses will continue to play a vital role in empowering aspirants and promoting academic excellence.
