REPORT

On 21st August 2024, a peer teaching session was conducted by Ms. Simna Mary Manoj K. for the students of II B.A. English at Naipunnya Institute of Management and Information Technology (NIMIT), Pongam, Koratty. The session commenced at 11:30 a.m. and was organised by the PG Department of English. Ms. Simna took up the thought-provoking essay, "Justice Versus Mercy" by Usha Jesudasan, a work that probes the ethical dilemma between delivering impartial justice and extending compassionate mercy.

Ms. Simna began the session by contextualizing the essay, discussing real-life scenarios where individuals and legal systems are compelled to balance these two seemingly opposing concepts. She effectively explained how the essay uses anecdotal and philosophical approaches to make readers question their own moral inclinations.

The session was enriched with classroom discussions where students shared their opinions, drawing parallels between the essay and contemporary legal or social issues. Ms. Simna's clarity in communication, empathetic tone, and interactive style helped foster a reflective and inclusive environment. Her approach highlighted the emotional and philosophical complexity of the topic.

The peer teaching session not only strengthened students' comprehension of the essay but also encouraged them to explore broader societal values. The effort was well-received, contributing positively to the academic culture of the department.
